History of Patchogue.

As this is the first Business and Residential Directory of Patchogue it would not be inappropriate to give a short historical sketch of our beautiful little city by the sea, as it is now appropriately termed.

The site of Patchogue, between the Patchogue river on the west and Swan river on the east, containing about 475 acres, was lot No. 3, known as Pochaug Neck, in a lottery sale made by Humphrey Avery in 1758. It was bought by Lefford Leffords for a nominal sum, the deeds for the same being acknowledged on March 5, 1759. This lot was situated south of Main street. All the property north of this street at that time was woodland and considered comparatively of little value. But Patchogue originally was built upon lot No. 5, known as Short Neck, containing about 175 acres, and was also owned by Humphrey Avery, who on February 27, 1759, deeded it to his son Humphrey Avery, Jr. It was here that the First Congregational, Methodist and Roman Catholic churches were erected, and it was here that the first factory was built over one hundred years ago, and it is here where Patchogue's greatest industry, the lace mills of the Patchogue Manufacturing Company are now located.

Other important industries in Patchogue are the planing and moulding mills of E. Bailey & Sons, which is the largest plant of its kind on Long Island; Justus Roe & Sons, manufacturers of surveyors' instruments, which are used in every state in the union and Canada; Hiscox's Chemical Works and the Hygeia Ice Comany.

Two excellent newspapers are published in Patchogue, the Argus, of which this publication is a product, and the Patchogue Advance.

Last, but not least, is our boat building industries, some of the fastest and best yachts, according to their size, being turned out from the Patchogue ship yards.

The name Patchogue is supposed to be of Indian origin, as the Patchogue tribe of Indians occupied the territory extending from the present site of the village to Canoe Place. The word Patchogue has been interpreted as meaning 'patches of water,' which the many lakes surrounding the village tend to substantiate. The first settlement of white men in Patchogue is supposed to have been about 1753, they coming here from New England.

Patchogue borders on the Great South Bay at its widest point, it being only four miles from the irregular Great South Beach opposite, which checks the Atlantic Ocean as it rolls on to the northward. The Great South Bay affords amusement to pleasure seekers, and gives tone and vigor to over-worked humanity. Across from its usually unruffled bosoms, nestles among the hills little places of resort where a feast fit for a king, a paddle in still waters, or a combat with foaming breakers, may be indulged in.

Patchogue is situated on the Montauk division of the Long Island Railroad, fifty-four miles from New York City, and which has now fourteen trains each way every twenty-four hours. The healthfulness of the location is beyond question. Patchogue is surrounded by four beautiful lakes, the famous Great South Bay and inviting pine woods, and its many picturesque scenes have been immortalized by the brush of the well known artist, Miss Irene K. Jerome, who once lived here. Its beautiful attractions have made Patchogue a great summer resort, and it is to-day the best known and most popular watering place on Long Island. There is probably no place in the United States where the death rate averages lower.

The purest of water and a careful local management insures a continuance of the town's health-giving qualities.

Patchogue is pleasantly laid out with good, wide and shady streets. North Ocean avenue, Ocean avenue and Main street are paved with vitrified brick in the business section. An efficient police and fire department is maintained. Patchogue is virtually a small city in itself of about six thousand inhabitants with all modern improvements, including city water, electric lights, gas and a free delivery of the mails daily.

Banking is one of the points which stand prominently in Patchogue's favor, for her banking institutions at once place the brand of stability on the community. There are three such institutions, which are managed by men of shrewd judgment.

Patchogue has appropriately been termed "A City of Homes." Rents are fair, and buildings comparatively cheap. Being only about an hour and a half's ride from New York City, away from the noise and bustle of business, Patchogue is indeed a favored spot. Patchogue and its inhabitants are prepared to welcome any who propose to make this their seat of operations, and to lend them every assistance which is in their power. Patchogue is located in one of the healthiest and most beautiful regions on Long Island, which is one of the most thriving sections of the country, and possesses admirable railroad facilities. The future of Patchogue is bright with the bow of promise. The capitalists and business men will be found neither stubbornly conservative nor rashly aggressive, but pursue a policy resulting in the establishing of a solid foundation.

The natural advantages and facilities for manufacturing in Patchogue are much better than is generally supposed. It has fresh water lakes, which furnish not only good water power, but soft, pure water suitable for any and every purpose. Patchogue river has been deepened and widened, a breakwater thrown out at the entrance, and although further improvements are necessary, we have an excellent harbor. North of the railroad the river extends one-third of a mile through the lowlands to the main road, where it receives the overflow of the west lake. No better location could be found for mills and factories than along this river. With unlimited grounds, abundance of pure, fresh water, fuel and raw material brought to their doors by boat or rail, nothing more could be desired for manufacturing.

There are no institutions worthier of the appreciation and love of the community than the churches existing in our midst. Identified with its earliest growth, throbbing with its life, participating in its reverses, sharing its prosperity, they seem to be invested with a personality to be loved and cherished like one of our household. There has never in the history of nations been an influence of such greatness as that wielded by the church, and these noble old traits one sees in mankind may be attributed to the good influence that our pastors and churches spread among us. Patchogue has been particularly blessed. Its pastors are men of talents, christian zeal and eloquence. The denominations represented are the Methodist Episcopal, Episcopal, Congregational, Baptist and Roman Catholic. All these various organizations are working in parallel lines for the advancement of morality and righteousness.

Secret societies are a blessing to mankind, because they strengthen our faith, intensify our love, and teach us to exercise charity in word and deed to all. They should be encouraged because they develop social and benevolent affections; because they mitigate without and annihilate within the violence of political and theological controversy; because they afford the only neutral ground upon which all ranks and classes can meet in perfect equality and association without degradation or mortification, whether for purposes of moral instruction or social intercourse; because they see to their members during sickness and alleviate their wants in distress. Such societies are well supported in Patchogue, the orders represented being the Masons, Odd Fellows, Foresters of America, Royal Arcanum, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Grand Army of the Republic, and Knights of Columbus.

The advantages and facilities of Patchogue in the educational department of economy are unsurpassed by those of any other place on Long Island and is a happy commentary on the character of the people that the schools are largely attended, and a degree of proficiency attained that tells better than words how faithful, consistent and able are the efforts of the principal, Dr. W. E. Gordon, and the corps of efficient teachers.

Patchogue can truly pride herself upon having the finest and best appointed hotels on Long Island, outside of Greater New York, well equipped with all modern improvements. The stores of Patchogue are fine, substantial structures of frame and brick, which are indeed a credit to any town.

The south side of Long Island in general and Patchogue in particular, is the wheelmen's paradise. All of our streets are in excellent condition and fine paths lead in all directions.

WELL DRESSED.

When printers speak of the way a thing is printed, the kind of type that is used, and the way it is put upon the page, they call it the dress, as, for instance, the dress of a newspaper.

They say that such and such a publication has a new dress of type. This is especially appropriate.

People who write speak of clothing their ideas in words. You, for instance, may write a booklet telling people why, why, might, could, should or would, be your customers vary. It is necessary that they should trade with you.

You have good ideas and you clothe them in the best words you know. The next step is to clothe these words in the best type dress that is possible. If words are the clothing of ideas, then printing must be the overcoat.

What kind of an overcoat does your printing wear? Is it a smart, fetching, up-to-date Tourist or Chesterfield? Or is it one of those old, short, wrinkly kinds which turn green after the second year?

Well-dressed printing commands the same respect in any community that a well-dressed, self-respecting man does.

You want your printing to represent you. Does it?
